Ao, in the presence of a host of dignitaries, shared about his personal experiences besides other difficulties and challenges faced by the North East footballers. He said it was a great honour that Dr. T. Ao played in a big club like Mohun Bagan and East Bengal, and went on to captain Indian Football Team to London Olympics in 1948.

Bhutia speaking on 'Nagaland football,' said over the years, Nagaland has failed to produce prominent players at national level after Dr. T. Ao, but he expressed hope that it is never too late to start. He added that today, North East is called the 'capital of Indian Football' and many North East players have come out in different age groups at national level but sadly, players from Nagaland are yet to make their mark.

Bhutia mentioned that he grew up in a remote area with no proper football ground to practise, no television to watch football matches or no source to learn about the sport, and attributed the success of his career in football to environment, culture and tradition of Sikkim in those days besides the inspiration he received from watching tournaments conducted during the special occasions.

Bhutia pointed that there will be challenges in terms of infrastructure or platforms, but when passion, hard work and the talent is put together, everything is possible. He said with the initiative of the state government and inauguration of Dr. T. Ao's tournament, he hoped that in the years to come, Nagaland will surely make its mark not only in football but in other fields as well.

Ao's name was forever paged in the lines of Indian sports, unerasable, leaving a landmark and a milestone for all the generations to come. He said Dr. T. SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS BUILDING CAPACITIES

A DIPR feature by: Temjenkaba, IA

The Government of Nagaland has taken a commitment to integrate the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) into the policy process of the state. In this regard, the state has proposed to organize a Capacity Building exercise in collaboration with United Nations Development Program (UNDP) for all the Nodal Officers in the state to enhance their understanding on the SDGs and start the process of designing Strategic Plans and Actions for departments to achieve the 17 Goals in a holistic manner.

Implementing SDGs requires new capacities and invigorating new ways of working in public institutions and among public servants.

To support integrated policies, government functionaries/officials need to be committed and equipped to identify and analyze inter-linkages, synergies and work across institutional boundaries and build partnerships.

Enhanced capacities are needed to improve sectoral policies, reach those who are furthest behind, envision the long-term impact of policies and possible scenarios as well as to collect and analyze data, other statistics and also urge for renewed efforts to make institutions transparent and accountable and to support participatory decision-making.

The Government of Nagaland has already started the process of nominating Nodal Officer from each department. It is planning to start the exercise of identifying the SDG Goal-wise indicators for schemes/programs in the state with the Planning Department taking a lead.

The Capacity Building Workshop was organized by Government of Nagaland in partnership with UNDP with a view to support the state departments in the process of understanding the SDGs and integrating it in their work, understanding available data, plan for a monitoring system towards SDG implementation and development strategies and sensitizing all departmental Nodal Officers on the SDGs. The role and the target is to work towards the fulfillment of the same and contextualizing the Global Goals to the local context and also developing an outline for each department on their strategies and actions to be achieved by 2030, and also creating a platform for SDG implementation in the state by understanding the use of data, current availability and periodicity of data for achieving the SDGs and to develop an institutional structure for taking forward SDGs in the state.

The main purpose of Capacity Building Workshop also include the participation of Principal Secretaries, Secretaries, Additional Secretaries of key Government Departments, Heads of Departments, Nodal SDG Officers and Officers from State Directorate of Planning and Finance, and by bringing on the board some eminent economists, planning specialists and sector stalwarts to ensure the process with expected economic growth of the state.

Some of the main target areas include:

- Enhancing the understanding on SDGs, challenges to its implementation thereby making Sustainable Development more responsive and relevant to local needs and aspirations.
- Undertaking an exercise on Mapping of the State and central schemes against the SDGs and development of integrated financing framework.
- Identification of state level indicators against the draft national indicators and correlating the same with the indicators identified in the vision plan exercise and finalization of indicators.
- Awareness generation and capacity building among all stakeholders for coordinated and pooled policy and support to meet the SDG targets while ensuring that the implementation process is partnership based, fully inclusive, transparent and accountable.
- To have a clear understanding on the contributions of the sub-national governments in the SDG agenda and have a clear understanding on achieving SDG localization, development of M&E and data collection tools for removal of data gaps and subsequent development of SDG District Index and State Dashboard.
- Help develop a SDG communication strategy to localize, domesticate and simplify the message of SDGs to support in generating awareness and lead to improved data generation and implementation.
- Defining a clear institutional structure for implementation of SDGs in the state, enhancing understanding on SDGs and defining the role of departments in the process.
- Define understanding on the local context of SDGs with both national and global perspectives.

The goal is to design a Strategic Plan and Action Plan framework which each department will devise for preparing the Vision Plan of Nagaland till 2030; define a set of base indicators which can be used to start designing a monitoring process; discuss about the availability of the data sets at the district level and proxy data for the indicators where data sources are not directly available.
